

Please join us for the

9th Annual Chanchlani Global Health Research Award & Lecture

And a celebration of

International Women's Day

Global Health. Global Vision.

Honoring this year's award recipient:

Dr. Nadine Caron

- Surgical oncologist and Canada's first female First Nations surgeon
- Inaugural First Nations Health Authority Chair in Cancer and Wellness, UBC
- Professor, Northern Medical Program and Department of Surgery, and Indigenous academic faculty, Faculty of Medicine, UBC
- Senior Scientist, Michael Smith Genome Sciences Centre
- Associate Faculty, Centre for American Indian Health, Johns Hopkins University
- Adjunct faculty, University of Northern BC
- Founding co-Director and Consultant, UBC Centre for Excellence in Indigenous Health (CEIH)

About the lecture

Dr. Caron's talk will draw on her research and advocacy work, which has influenced Canadian health policy to better meet the needs of marginalized populations, including Indigenous, northern and rural residents. She will ask us to think more deeply about the health of Indigenous peoples, in Canada and globally, provoking our students, Faculty, and leaders to think about solutions.

Perspectives of a First Nations physician in Canada: Do you ever wonder what we think?
